The EDD and real people, staying afoul

It was already widely apparent to everyone that California’s Employment Development Department was ill-suited to the task of handling unemployment claims. But we have a clearer picture of just how bad things have gotten with the recently released report by the “strike team” ordered by Gov. Gavin Newsom to assess what was going on at the EDD.

The “strike team” answer is Newsom in bullying terms to Republicans who are opposing Newsom’s proposed tax on businesses for the supposed purpose of funding the state’s unemployment benefits. The strike team report, released last week, is simply a fraud. It doesn’t address the root cause of the EDD’s meltdown problem: One of the most conspicuous failures of Newsom’s operation of the state government is the ED; its performance has been abysmal. Newsom’s record in addressing the state’s EDD meltdown problem is that of a man who has failed to understand the problem to begin with.

The strike team report is a political cover-up. Newsom appointed the strike team from the top to bottom to be his friends. They are all loyal Newsom sycophants, and they are as ignorant of the EDD meltdown problem as was Newsom himself. The strike team was tasked with “assessing EDD’s capacity to handle increased volume from the pandemic and providing recommendations for reform” as if that were all that was needed to fix a broken system.

The strike team report is a fraud. The strike team does not address the root causes of the EDD’s system meltdown. The strike team does not identify the state’s financial meltdown as an issue. The strike team does not even mention the state’s financial meltdown.
